Dear professor Rian Vebrianto:

The reviewer of An Analysis Of Strengthening Indonesian Malaysian Preservice Teachers In The 21st Century considers accepted subject to a second revision. "The manuscript represents an interesting cross-sectional and descriptive investigation, which implies to determine the strengthening of 21st Century Teacher Candidate Skills and the relationship between the two countries (Indonesia and Malaysia), specifically at Universities's campus areas, both with different locations. Indeed, Authors with a good literary selection, a relevant social and academic approach and a good capacity for analysis, reach very important conclusions. Specifically, Authors reported that the strengthening of the 21st Century Candidate Skills of prospective teachers in Indonesia was still low when compared to those of Malaysia, but the results of relations between the two regions had the same relationship or wasn't statistically significant. Despite of the above mentioned and as a result of the revision carried out, there are numerous and important observations, suggestions and request for clarifications and corrections, that must be entirely addressed by the Authors, in order to adapt the document to the rigor of a scientific publication and transform the current document for to become it in an instrument valid and credible on the worldwide, that also could be used as consultation document".

Dear professor Rian Vebrianto:

The reviewer of An Analysis Of Strengthening Indonesian Malaysian Preservice Teachers In The 21st Century upon reading the article, concluded that: The corrected manuscript collects the corrections based on the comments made, which improved the quality of the document. However, in the Conclusion there are some ambiguities of interpretation. The reviewer made some suggestions, but, are the Authors who finally Will have to review and show their agreement (or not), with said suggestion. The Authors must be requested to review these suggestions and adapt them to their results. The manuscript will be finally approved when the Authors manifest agree to the suggestions or provide a new wording (not ambiguous)".

The suggestions are found are indicated directly in the attached article.
