CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Problem

Reading is the most important element in the world. Reading could Z provide us with all kinds of information. Reading is also a part of student learning, including learning English. As learners, students are certainly faced with various kinds of learning activities such as discussing, doing assignments, studying in groups, studying in pairs, etc. In learning English, reading is one of the 4 basic skills that must be mastered besides writing, listening, and speaking. Larasati (2018) Reading is one of the most important things in the field of education, because as we know students be mastered their skill with reading. In addition, Grab (2009) said that reading is the skill to draw meaning from the printed page and interpret this information appropriately.

The activity of reading when reading is done regularly, is viewed as a habit. In addition, a habit is a behavior that is consistent, reliable, regular, and challenging to stop doing. For reading to develop a habit for students, they must have the desire to read and read repeatedly over a long period. Wagner (2002) this habit is usually considered about the amount of materials read, the frequency of reading, and also the average time spent on reading. Shen (2006) Syarif Kasim Riau reading habit is not about when someone starts reading, but it is all about how

I often, how much, and what the texts are. Furthermore, Gaona (2011) also o explained the indicators of reading habits. They were students' attitudes toward reading, reading frequency, books read, time spent on academic reading, time spent on nonacademic reading, motivation in the family environments, and motivation in the academic environments.

S Reading habits can be considered by how often a person reads or the frequency of reading and how much time is spent on it. By reading books, one gets confirmation or rejection of one's ideas, which makes one think more critically about right and wrong in society (Bergland in Abeyrathna, 2004). The frequency of reading and the average length of time spent on reading materials are referred to as the reading habit.

In the new curriculum of English Education Department at State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau, students must have good abilities in all subject. To achieve this, students are required to read more. However, students reading interest is still low. Low reading interest can occur because some of the students find it hard to understand reading material that is written in English more than what is written in Indonesia. This could happen because they have less knowledge about vocabulary which results in lack of knowledge of the text or material that has been given by the lecturer.

of Sultan Based on the observation above, it can be concluded that some of the students still face difficulties in English especially in reading, which has an Syarif Kasim Riau impact on students reading interest. Some of the students struggle with the

I learning process since they are unable to learn the skills required for reading o and rarely read English in their daily lives. Because of these symptoms, it causes to students be lazy to read. Also, lack of knowledge of vocabulary in reading can cause students to lack knowledge of the text or material.

 \subset The researcher also presents some previous research that relates to this research. First, Ika Lisna Hidayati (2020) was conducted a research entitled "A Study on Students Reading Habit at State Senior High School 6 Pekanbaru". Second, Suci Anggraini (2022) was conducted a research entitled "Investigating Students' Reading Habit in Learning English at Islamic Boarding Senior High School in Pekanbaru.". Third, Hanah, et.al (2020) was conducted a research entitled "Investigating Students' Reading Interest On English Reading Materials Through Their Reading Habits During a Pandemic". Fourth, Fitri Dewi Sartika (2020) was conducted a study entitled "The Correlation Between Students' Reading Habit And Their Reading Comprehension". Last, Devita Ariani Kusairi (2019) was conducted a research entitled "A Study on Students Reading Habit in English Language Education Department Students of the University of Muhammadiyah Malang"

University Based on previous studies, the researcher concluded that reading habits are very important in achieving knowledge that is useful for the reader. However, based on previous studies about reading habit that has been carried out a lot, but there are not many researchers focused on university especially in the English Department (e.g, Suci Anggraini (2022), Ika Lisna Hidayati (2020), Fitri Dewi Sartika (2020), and Hanah, et.al (2020)). Therefore, this research can fill the phenomena illustrated.

Based on explanation above, the researcher is intend to conduct a research entitled "AN INVESTIGATION OF READING HABITS OF THE FIFTH SEMESTER STUDENTS IN THE ENGLISH EDUCATION DEPARTMENT AT STATE ISLAMIC UNIVERSITY OF SULTAN SYARIF KASIM RIAU".

B. Problem of the Research

1. Identification of the Problem

Based on the background that the researcher found from the preliminary study, the researcher identifies some problems of this research as follows:

- a. Some of the students are not interested in reading.
- b. Some of the students often have difficulties in reading.
- c. Some of the students are too lazy to read.

2. Limitation of the Problem

Based on the identification of the problem above, the researcher needs to limit the problems in this research to focus on the topic. Indeed, the problems are limited to reading habits. Thus, in this research, the researcher only focused on investigating students' reading habits in the

D= Definition of Terms

To avoid misunderstanding and misinterpretation in this research, the definition of the terms is essential view to clarify.

$\frac{7}{\omega}$ 1. Reading

According to Nunan (2003), reading is a fluent process of the readers combining information from a text and their background knowledge to build meaning. Also, Tarigan (1998:p.7) reading is a process that is used by a reader to get the purpose of the writer through the written word. It means, that when a reader reads a text, he uses his brain to think and reason out.

It can be concluded that reading is a process for the readers to gain information or knowledge from a text and uses their background knowledge to build meaning.

2. Habit

According to Richards and Schmidt (2010), habit is defined as an automatic and rigid pattern of behavior in a specific situation. Habit is habituated routines of behavior that are repeated regularly, and tend to

In addition, habit is an activity or behaviour that are repeated regularly and doing it subconsciously.

Reading Habit

Reading activity is regarded as a habit when it is done repeatedly. According to Shen (2006), reading habit is how often, how much, and what students read. In this research, reading habit refers to a student's habit of reading.

It can be concluded that reading habit is a habit that is done repeatedly based on how much the time spent, how often in reading, and what they read.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF RELATED LITERATURE

A. Theoretical Framework

Reading

Definition of Reading

Reading is an activity carried out by everyone who wants to obtain information or knowledge. According to Harmer (2002), reading is a receptive skill. Receptive skills are how people extract meaning from the discourses they see or hear. In this aspect, the cognitive processes involved in reading are similar to those involved in listening. Thanuskodi (2011), defined reading as a process of understanding the real meaning of what authors delivered in written form by using over eyes and mind. This indicates that to interpret the material, reading requires synchronicity between eyes and mind. The term "read" is derived from "read," which means to examine and comprehend the meaning of written or printed words or symbols, according to the Oxford Dictionary. It implies that reading is a process of understanding what the writers mean to deliver over textual symbols.

Reading is a cognitive process that aids in language comprehension for students. Students are required to comprehend the content while reading and learn something from the writer's thoughts. The ability to read meaningfully is necessary for students to read with understanding. In other words, students should be able to identify, analyze, and comprehend the information represented in words or sentences.

According to Richards and Renandya (2002), reading is a skill that is highly valued by students and teachers. Nunan (2006), reading is a set of skills that involves making sense and deriving meaning from printed words. Reading, in summary, is the process of determining reader's comprehension, which the entails understanding and extrapolating meaning from printed words for various purposes.

Training, progress, and improvement should be constant for the reading process. Reading also requires either creativity or analytical thought. Every sentence in commercial writing is an offer, naturally diverting from the exact meaning to contrive images that make sense to the reader in the unfamiliar situations it describes.

Furthermore, Grabe and Stoller (2002), stated that reading also has to do with purposes, experiences, strategies, skills, and even attitude towards reading. It means that reading facilitates a writer to share knowledge, ideas, and feelings with the reader. Collins and Collins (2002), said that reading is a mental process. Although the eyes are involved in sending information about print to the brain, the brain performs the real act of reading. Then, reading is a mental process that involves deriving meaning and sending information about print to the brain until it is the real action of reading. It means that reading could be concluded as an activity to understand the meaning of the authors' purpose delivered in written language.

Based from the explanation above, it can be concluded that reading defined as an activity that is done by everyone in order to gain information or knowledge on what they read and combine with their based knowledge to think and reason out.

Purpose of Reading b.

The main purpose of reading is to gain information and understand the content. Grabe and Stoller (2002) in Nurfadhilah (2015) proposed the purpose of reading which consists of reading to find simple information, to skim, to learn from text, to combine information, to write or search for information needed for writing, to criticize text and reading for general comprehension.

Another purpose of reading is proposed by Anderson in Tarigan (2008) which consists of five purposes of reading. The following is the explanation:

Habit

Habit is a program that is done slowly, repeatedly, and continuously. Longman (2010) defined habit as a pattern behavior that is regular and which has become almost automatic as a result of repetition. In other meaning, Carter (1973) said that habit is an action practiced continuously until it becomes a patterned behavior, and it is usually performed without being conformed unconsciously because the practice has become familiar and easy.

Nilsen (2012) said that habit is repeated behavior that becomes automatic action without purposeful thinking, and there is no sense of awareness. This means that Habits are activities that a person does automatically and systematically, without thinking and without giving a feeling of difficulty or burden when doing it. Also, according to Clark Rumbold (2006), In addition to personal and intellectual development, reading is a gateway to social, economic, and civic life.

Habit is an activity where a person can do it without feeling burdened, can be done every day, and there is no feeling of boredom when doing it gradually and continuously. As cited in Oxford Learner's Pocket Dictionary (2005, p.199), habit is a thing that a person does often and almost without thinking, especially something that is hard to stop doing. Moreover, in Cambridge Advanced Learner's Dictionary is also defined that habit is something that you do regularly or usually, often without thinking about it because you have done it so many times before.

Because it is sometimes required to engage in self-analysis when completing routine tasks, habitual behavior frequently goes unnoticed by the individuals who exhibit it. If someone has a habit, they will often focus when reading. In addition, Chettri and Rout (2013, p.14) stated that terms habits are often considered in terms of the amount of things being done, the frequency of something that we do as well as the average time spent on what we do. Based on some definitions of habit above, it can be concluded that habits are related to hobbies. Habits are carried out continuously without getting bored, without coercion or pressure, and it is difficult to stop doing them.

In conclusion, habit is an activity or behaviour that are repeated regularly and doing it subconsciously. Repeatedly activity or behaviour which has become almost automatic as a result of repetition.

Reading Habit

a. Definition of Reading Habit

Reading activity is considered a habit when it is done repeatedly. (Nilsen, 2012), stated that habit is behavior that has been repeated until it has become more or less automatic, enacted without purposeful thinking, large without any sense of awareness. (Wagner, 2002), reading habits are often viewed in terms of the material read, reading frequency, and average reading time. In short, a reading habit is a repeated reading activity until it has become a regular habit.

The frequency of reading, the amount of reading material received, and the average time spent reading are all described as reading habits. A great reading habit can help significantly students achieve academic achievement. A strong reading habit can significantly increase a student's overall academic achievement. Moreover, Thanuskodi (2011) stated that the reading habit is one of the powerful and lasting influences in the promotion of one's personal development in particular and social progress in general.

According to the previous explanation above, it can be concluded that reading consistently would benefit the learner's acquisition of knowledge, improvement of academic performance in the classroom, and social well-being. Reading habits refer to the practice of obtaining information or knowledge through written materials to continuously increase knowledge or experience until it becomes a habit.

b. Concept of Reading Habit

According to Andrews (1903), a habit, from the standpoint of psychology, is a more or less fixed way of thinking, willingness, or feeling acquired through previous repetition of a mental experience. It means that habit is a mental process as a means of thinking that is acquired through mental experience. According to Zwiers (2004), reading habits more clearly describe the automatic and unconscious processes that are involved in constructing meaning from text. Then, reading habit refers to the automatic process as the readers read the textual material and derive meaning unconsciously.

According to Zwiers (2004), comprehension habits are the split-second thoughts that kick in constantly to help a proficient reader actively construct meaning. Then, building reading habits will constantly help the readers construct meaning actively. Patel and Jain (2008) state that reading habits not only help the student to get knowledge and wisdom from the cultural heritage but are also very helpful in passing for leisure period.

In addition, reading is an important basic skill for humans. Therefore, reading habits need to be grown in every human being as a mandatory activity. A person will obtain comprehensive knowledge and understanding from the habit of reading since human beings will not be separated from the desire for information that is often available in the form of reading. Tampubolon (1990) stated that the habit of reading is one of the deciding factors in the ability to read. Automatically, if the reading is often performed the reading skills will also be getting better.

In conclusion, concept of reading habit can be defined as a relatively stable way of thought, willingness, or emotion that has been developed through repeated psychological experiences. This indicates that a habit is a method of thinking that is developed via mental experience.

c. The Aspects of Reading Habit

To determine a person's level of reading habits, several researchers demonstrated several aspects of measuring effective reading habits. Rosidi (1983), cited in Wahyuni (2014), proposes two ways of measuring a person's reading habits.

1) The Frequency of Reading Habit

The amount of time that the reader spends reading may indicate whether that person has a high interest in reading or not. As Akande (2007) in Nurfadhilah (2015) disclosed the majority of students spend reading between 1-2 hours per day on reading. This is in line with Nell's (1988) article about reading quantity was asked about how long respondents read a day. Therefore, reading frequency is the frequency that the person who reads some reading materials in their spare time (Gaona, 2011). Besides that, according to several authors (e.g. Katsikas and Leontsini, Anderson, Wilson, and Fielding, 1996) in Gaona (2011) one of the indicators to determine the presence

Motivation 2)

There are two factors why someone is motivated to read; those are internal and external. Yoke, Anuar, and Vasuthavan (2008) as cited in Nurfadhilah (2015) found internal and external factors do play a role in nurturing the habit of reading. The meaning of internal factor is something that emerges from within. But, external factor comes from someone's environment such as home environment and school environment.

Internal motivation comes from within. According to Applegate & Applegate (2004), Intrinsically motivated readers engage in reading for its own sake and enjoy satisfying their curiosity. This means readers have their willingness to read no matter what their reason. Therefore, internal motivation in reading can lead students to reach their goals.

According to Iftanti (2015), a habit of reading is not only constructed in an individual but also influenced by some external factors such as environment, education, social background, and facilities. Environmental factors can impact students' reading habits. One of its factors is the school environment including teaching methods. Well-prepared teaching methods can build the spirit of students in reading. In addition, the role of the teacher is also incorporated into the reading habits of the students. Moreover, facilities can encourage students to be motivated to build reading habits.

In the other reference, According to Cesar, Gaona & Gonzalez (2011) there are seven indicators of reading habits:

- Reading frequency; the individual reports of books read in someone's leisure time. It is an activity where somebody reads for a few minutes or hours.
- Books read; the individual report of the sum of books having read by someone in the last three months.
- Time spent on academic reading; the time spent by someone reading their academic book, is identified with the subject of their study.
- Time spent on non-academic reading; the time spent by someone to read the book that is not specifically associated with the subject of their study.
- 5) Motivation in the family environment; it is correlated to someone's will to buy books, recommended books, and reading interest in the family.
- Motivation in the academic environment; is correlated to the teachers' command to read books.

Attitude toward reading; the person reports on the attitude and behavioral cognitive-affective attitude towards reading.

Based on the explanation above, it can be concluded that there are several aspects in reading habits such as the frequency of reading, motivation in the family and the academic environment, books read, attitude toward reading, and time spent on academic and non-academic reading.

Spending time reading in class is crucial because it allows students to practice reading skills and also results in the learning of new knowledge. Prior knowledge and reading have a constant advantageous and positively helpful relationship, according to the research. Providing time for increased reading, on the other hand, is not enough.

To improve reading habits student must;

- Provide a choice of reading selections. 1)
- Ensure their reading text is of optimal difficulty with their 2) challenge but do not discourage.
- 3) Encourage rereading of texts.
- 4) Allow readers to discuss what they read to others to encourage social negotiation of meaning.

Accordingly, good reading habits of the students are defined as a repeated desired reading behavior that becomes the second nature of the students. A good reading habit is indicated by fluency, automaticity (Morrison et.al, 2009), accuracy, highly enjoyable reading practices, a vast amount of reading, good proficiency in English, positive attitude toward reading, conscious and avid reading, having a teacher who shared a love of reading (Park, 2006), self-selection of books, motivation to read, eagerness to receive a book as a present (Jamnik, 2005), and regular reading after school hours (Adetunji & Oladeji, 2007). Moreover, poor reading habits can be classified as poor mental habits, it can be determined by rarely reading or passive reading, aimless reading, and regressing.

The establishment of a reading habit is a process of socialization that is determined by the learning that occurs in many contexts; the promotion of reading depends not only on knowledge and abilities but also on students waiting to read. A library is a resource that, to some extent, promotes reading. The purpose and function of a library is to make its collections available to society, therefore, the library as a learning organization is determined to implement new strategies and ways to find information. This leads students to learn a new literacy competence. This skill is developed by the reading habit, which allows for greater comprehension and survey, practical, contextualization, delineations,

In developing reading interest, Palani (2012) suggested some general techniques to develop reading abilities:

- Parental guidance and encouragement. 1)
- Motivation by teachers. 2)
- Inculcation of desirable hobbies and interests. 3)
- Constant use of the dictionary. 4)
- Daily newspaper reading. 5)
- Book reading. 6)
- Visiting libraries. 7)
- Well-constructed reading material. 8)
- Study improving vocabulary and language. 9)

Elias and Ingram (1997) stated that the child who is unfamiliar with the reading experience, for example, whose home is devoid of reading materials, who has never been read to, or who has never come to see reading as a thing of important in his environment may lack a realization even after entering school. Furthermore, in measurable terms, reading habits as stated by Chettry and Rout (2013) are often considered in terms of the amount of materials being read, the frequency of reading as well as the average time spent on reading. Gaona (2011) summarized seven aspects of reading habits, namely:

- Reading frequency is used to measure students' reading frequency in their spare time.
- Books read are the number of many books that the students have read.
- Time spent on academic reading is considered as the time that the students devote their time to read academic book especially for their specialist subject.

The Factors Influence Students Reading Habit e.

Students' reading habits have frequently aroused the interests of educators, parents, librarians, publishers, and other stakeholders. Understanding students' reading habits and preferences would allow them to take the required steps to promote reading among students. It is well accepted that a lifelong habit of reading is best developed and cultivated at a young age. However, it has been observed that students put an excessive focus on studying reading rather than leisure or voluntary reading. Several elements encourage students to read. According to Books Aid International, over half of the UK students who participated in the study claimed they read for relaxation, whereas the majority of children from twelve developing countries stated they read to pass exams. A study of young people aged 11 to 18 in the United Kingdom conducted by Market & Opinion International MORI, discovered that peer influence was the most important factor for reading books. A survey of prekindergarten through grade eight students in the United States conducted by Cosgrove at the European Reading Conference, discovered that 71% of students who perceived themselves as good readers had a positive attitude toward reading, while none of the students who perceived themselves as poor readers enjoyed reading.

Lim discovered in Malaysian research of 6th form-students for his dissertation in 1974 that the most significant motivation was self or personal interests, and this positive attitude was well established among the girls and those in the Arts stream. In Sri Lanka, the National Library and Documentation Service Board (NLDB) conducted a survey in 2002 and discovered the following situations: students reading habits were poor, school libraries were in poor condition due to outdated book collections, and most students read "light" materials such as magazines, novels, comic books, and newspapers.

Gunasekara investigated reading issues in Sri Lankan secondary schools for his journal "Education in Sri Lanka" and discovered three major obstacles to the promotion of reading habits. These include a propensity for chatting and listening to the radio, a lack of borrowing materials in school libraries, and a preference for television viewing. The majority of my reading was done for test purposes.

A survey of 8000 children aged 10, 12, and 14 in the United Kingdom discovered that children had a wide range of reading interests. A similar survey on children was done in Denmark. Over a period of one month, children read a total of 1598 fiction and nonfiction books published by over 700 writers. According to Woolcott (2001), students at primary schools in Australia like reading action adventure as much as science fiction and fantasy, however in the United Kingdom, fantasy fiction was the most popular, followed by comedy, horror, and thriller books.

According to research conducted by Liu in 2000 about the favorite leisure activities of primary and middle school children in China, "watching television" was the most popular leisure activity, followed by reading books. In Hong Kong, a comparable survey of primary 1 to secondary 5 students revealed that watching TV and playing computer games were the two most popular after-school activities. Another British survey found that teens aged 11 to 18 were more likely to watch TV or use the internet than read books. According to the literature study, multiple factors, notably advances in technology, are likely to impact children's or students' reading habits.

Based from the previous research above, it can be simplified that lack of access to the library and the internet, use of electronic media for entertainment, inability to buy books, lack of time, influence of television, and a busy academic schedule are all factors that influence students' reading habits.

C∓Operational Concept

According to Syafi'i (2016), operational concepts are derived from related theoretical concepts for all variables in the research title that should be practically and empirically operated in academic writing. It should be interpreted into particular words to make it easy to measure. Operational concept is the concept used to clarify the theories used in the research to avoid misunderstanding. This research is descriptive research that focuses on Zreading habits among the students at the State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau. Therefore, there is one variable that is used in this research.

The indicator of the variable is taken from Gaona (2011). The indicators are developed based on the following aspects:

- Students attitude toward reading. 1.
- Students reading frequency.
- Students read amount of books.
- 2. 3. 4. 5. 6. 7. State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau Time spent on academic reading.
 - Time spent on non-academic reading
 - Motivation in the family environment.
 - Motivation in the academic environment.

CHAPTER III

METHOD OF THE RESEARCH

A. Research Design

This research is a descriptive quantitative research. Descriptive research is a survey research (Gay, 2000). According to Creswell (2012), o survey research designs are produced in quantitative research because the researcher collected the data using a questionnaire in which investigators survey a sample or the entire population of people to describe the attitude, opinion, behavior, or characteristic of the population.

The Location and Time of the Research

This research was conducted at the State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau. It is located at HR. Soebrantas Street No. 155, Km. 15, RW. 15, Simpang Baru, Pekanbaru. This research was conducted from July to December 2023.

C. The Subject and Object of the research

The subject of this research was the fifth-semester students at the State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau. The object of this research was students' reading habits at the State Islamic University of Sultan of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau.

Syarif Kasim Riau.

D.T. The Population and Sample of the Research

According to Creswell (2012), a population is a group of individuals who have the same characteristics. The population of this research is the fifth-semester students at the State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau. The researcher focused on the English Education Department major because there are 5 classes with the total number of students included in the following table:

Table III. 1

According to Cree target population that the the target population. To participants who are re research, the researcher participants in this study typical procedure that units that units the target population.

According to Creswell (2012), the sample is a subgroup of the target population that the researcher plans to study for generalizing about the target population. Thus, the researcher can choose a sample of participants who are representative of the entire population. In this research, the researcher used a simple random sampling method. The participants in this study had equal opportunities to be a sample. The typical procedure that used in simple random sampling is to assign a number to each individual (or site) in the population and then use a random numbers table, available in many statistic books, to select the individuals (or site) for the sample (Cresswell, 2008). According to Arikunto (2006), if the population is more than 100, the researcher should take the sample in the range of 10-15%, 20-25%, or more. So, the researcher took 20% students of the population which means 30 students as the sample from the total population (145 students).

Technique of Collecting the Data

In this research, the researcher used a questionnaire method. Questionnaires, interviews, and observations are among the instruments that may be used to measure habits. Because a habit is an attitude of conduct, an attitude scale can be used to measure the habit. According to Sudjana (2008), an attitude scale is used to measure a person's attitude toward a certain object. One of the scales to measure attitude scale is the Likert Scale.

Sultan As stated above by Sudjana (2008) in the Likert Scale, expression asked, whether positive or negative expression, marked by the subject Syarif Kasim Riau always, often, sometimes, seldom, and never. In addition, Sugiyono (2015)

I stated that the Likert Scale is used to measure attitudes, opinions, and operceptions of individuals or groups of individuals about social phenomena.

There are five alternative answers to Likert's Scale for the questionnaires are explained as follows:

_ CAL : Always SL : Seldom

OF : Often NV : Never uska

ST : Sometimes Z

In conclusion, the simplest approach to assessing students' habits is through a questionnaire that uses a Likert Scale since it deals with students' habits and preferences among activities, hobbies, or other factors. The researcher sent questionnaires to the sample students to determine their reading habits scores.

Item

According to Creswell (2008), validity is the individual's scores from an instrument that makes sense, is meaningful, and enables you to draw good conclusions from the sample you are studying. In this research, the researcher used Content Validity to valid the instrument. According to Haynes et.al (1995), Content Validity is a degree to which the elements of an evaluation instrument are representative of the construct of interest.

12. Reliability

According to Siregar (2004), reliability tests can be done in external and internal ways. In this study, the researcher applied internal consistency, in which the researcher conducted the questionnaire once and examine each item using the Cronbach Alpha Technique. According to Sugiyono (2015), the Cronbach Alpha Technique can be used for interval data.

The categories below are the level of internal consistency of the Cronbach's Alpha:

TABLE III.5
A Commonly Accepted Rule of Cronbach Alpha

	Cronbach Alpha	Internal Consistency
	>0.90	Very highly reliable

The researcher also used the SPSS 23.0 program to find out whether the Instrument was reliable or not.

which is 0,60. Therefore, it can be concluded that the test is reliable, and the level of reliability is enough.

Ga The Technique of Analyzing Data

For the technique of data analysis, the researcher used a quantitative analysis. According to Nunan (2002), quantitative research describes a researcher's problem through a description of trends or a need for an explanation of the relationship among variables collecting numeric data from a large number of people using instruments with present questions and responses.

This research investigated students' reading habits and the formula as follows:

$$P = \frac{f}{n} \times 100$$

P = Number of percentage

n = Number of sample

f = Frequency

CHAPTER V

CONCLUSION AND SUGGESTION

A Conclusion

After the researcher conducted the research and data analysis for the Z data obtained in the framework of the discussion of the thesis entitled "An Investigation of Reading Habits of the Fifth Semester Students in the English Education Department at State Islamic University Of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau", it could be concluded that the results of students' reading habit of the fifth semester students in the English Education Department at State Islamic University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau was categorized as high level with classification score was 62% with the mean score was 62.23.

B. Suggestion

University of Sultan Syarif Kasim Riau

After the discussion of the theme of this thesis, the researcher hoped that thoughts in this thesis could be beneficial to all parties. Therefore, the researcher conveyed some suggestions as follows:

For the Lecturer

In order to increase more of the students' reading habit, the lecturer should give more E-book or learning text to stimulate students' interest in reading so they want to read more. Also, the lecturer should do many activity related to reading habit for the student. The lecturer should motivate their students more about the importance of reading habit. Therefore, hopefully the students will have a good reading habit.

For the Student

Students should pay more attention about reading activity given by the lecturer. Make reading as a daily habit by increasing more books read a day. Also student should increase their awereness about how important a reading habit is.

For the Researcher

For further research, this research can be a stepping stone that other researcher wants to conduct a study related to students' reading habit. Also, if the same research is going to be conducted, additional instruments of data collection technique.
