CHAPTER I

INTRODUCTION

A. Background of the Problem

People can get a lot of knowledge, information, pleasure, and problem-solving skills via reading. Reading is the most commonly used skill among students studying English all around the world. Reading is one of the most significant components of learning English because it not only expands students' vocabulary but also their understanding. Reading is also one of the most significant activities for kids who otherwise would not be able to obtain knowledge.

According George and Loretta (2008), People can extend their perspectives in a global society via reading, and eventually construct a self-fulfilling, engaging, and worthwhile life. Above all, effective reading is the most critical path to effective learning in all content areas and associated fields. Students can gather information from a variety of sources by reading.

Furthermore, reading is a necessary skill that should be followed up with comprehension. Reading comprehension is defined as the ability to analyze text, understand its meaning, and integrate it with previous knowledge. According to Apriliyanti, Tarigan, and Pangaribuan (2018), reading comprehension is an active process in which the reader is required to participate. It can also be taught as a strategic procedure. Words are associated with their meaning in the reader's memory as understanding takes place, and phrases and sentences are processed as clearly as possible to ensure that the meanings gained from one word, phrase, or sentence are not forgotten before the next is processed. Knowing the meaning of words, the ability to understand the meaning of a word from discourse context, the ability to draw inferences from a passage about its contents, the ability to identify the main thought of a passage, the ability to answer questions answered in a passage, and the ability to recognize literary devices or propositional structures are all essential skills for effective reading comprehension. Narrative, recount, report, descriptive, explanation, analytical exposition, hortatory exposition, procedure, discussion, news item, and so on are all examples of reading texts. Furthermore, comprehension of the meaning of short functional texts and essays such as descriptive, recount, and narrative text is a standard ability of pupils in the tenth grade.

Based on the researcher's preliminary study at Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang on February 8th, 2023 by interviewing the English teacher and 60 tenth-grade students who agreed to be interviewed, the researcher concludes that many of student's difficulty in understanding the meaning of words particularly in learning to read texts, among others were (1) Students lacked motivation in studying reading. (2) Most of them had a lack of vocabulary. (3) The students could not find the main idea of the paragraphs. (4) The students were unable to find general and specific information from the text. (5) Lastly, students did not understand the reading passage/text. As a result of which they are unable to comprehend the meaning and gather information from the texts they read.

The researcher believes that the inaccuracy of the learning techniques utilized when learning English is to blame for the current problems. In order to encourage student interest in learning and provide actual experiences, learning techniques that involve students directly in learning are required. Students will easily grasp the curriculum and be excited about participating in learning activities if they are given real-life experiences. To improve reading comprehension, a variety of techniques and approaches can be used. Among these one of them is Context Clues Technique.

Context clues are information in the textual content, which can be used to help deduce the means of an unknown vocabulary phrase within the textual content. According to Apriliyanti, Tarigan, and Pangaribuan (2018), teachers can emphasize specific indications that students should look for in text to assist students acquire the capacity to use context to uncover the meaning of unknown words. Context clues can be simple and point the reader to the word's definition. The standard philosophy regarding prioritizing context clues in any strategy for identifying semantically unfamiliar words is clearly stated by Nist (1985) “Try context first, structure second, say third, and, if all else fails, then, and only then, look up the dictionary”. The context clues can assist pupils in determining the meaning of a word. According to Bush (1998), contextual clues are a useful way to introduce unfamiliar words and ought to be used in the classroom. he also adds that sometimes all that is needed to help pupils understand a word and improve their comprehension of a text is to just provide them with the definition. Context clues are words, pictures, graphs, tables, and side notes, all of which are probably covered within the text. moreover, it can additionally be used to overcome the students' issues discover the main idea, get the specific information, make inferences, reference, and identify the vocabularies from the text given by using the teacher.

Based on the previous research by Wulandari (2017), The Use of Context Clues in Improving Students' Reading Ability. the researcher concluded that the students' reading ability was improved from pre-test and progress test from cycle to cycle. In the first cycle, the mean score of the students' reading ability was 77.6. Then, in the second cycle, it improved to 88.8. Another research conducted by Maysarah and Rahmah (2013), Improving Students' Comprehension in Reading Report Text by Using Context Clues Technique. The research results showed that using the Context Clues Technique could improve students' comprehension in reading report text. The mean score of the first meeting test in the first cycle was 60.87, the mean score of the third meeting test in the first cycle was 74.35, and the mean score of the third meeting test in the second cycle was 94.35.

In summary, this research is crucial because previous studies have indicated that students facing reading comprehension issues, such as difficulty understanding the meaning of words, can improve their reading comprehension. Students' challenges in reading comprehension can be addressed through the Context Clues Technique. This technique has proven to play a significant role in enhancing students' skills, particularly in reading comprehension. Researchers are interested in research because this technique has benefits, such as the potential contribution to current knowledge, which will provide more insight into the usefulness of the Context Clue Technique as an appropriate solution for students who struggle with reading and interpreting written material.

B. Identification of the Problem

supporting details, and ultimately, a notable lack of motivation among students in the study of reading.

C. Limitation of the Problem

G. Definition of the Terms

In order to explain and avoid misunderstanding and misinterpretation about the meaning of the terms used in this research, the researcher provides the following definitions:

1. Reading Comprehension

According to Ramadhani, and Harputra (2016), a person with strong comprehension abilities is referred to as an active reader since they are able to interact with words by fully comprehending their meaning and the concept behind them.

2. Narrative Text

According to Wardiman et al. (2008:133), the purpose of narrative is to amuse, entertain, and deal with a real or imagined experience in various ways.

3. Context Clues

According to Apriliyanti, Tarigan, and Pangaribuan (2018), teachers can emphasize specific indications that students should look for in text to assist students acquire the capacity to use context to uncover the meaning of unknown words.

CHAPTER II

REVIEW OF THE RELATED LITERATURE

A. Theoretical Framework

1. Context Clues

Sometimes while reading, you come across an unfamiliar word. Use the text's clues to determine the meaning. The words and sentences around the unknown word can provide clues. These are known as context clues. They are sometimes found near the new word, or you must look in the paragraph preceding or following the term.

One of the many techniques teachers frequently employ to help students become better readers is the context clues. According to Roell (2020), context clues are only suggestions or extra details the author includes to aid in understanding the meaning of a specific word or phrase. Keep an eye out for these hints whenever a new term appears in the passage; they may appear in the same phrase as the vocabulary word. Additionally, context clues might help students who are having trouble deducing meaning from unfamiliar terms or figuring out the primary topic of a book. The students can fill in the blanks in incredibly useful ways.

According to Zuhra and Ningsih (2019) “context clues are a technique to find the meaning of a difficult word in the text by looking around. The clues can be found before or after the word stated”. When reading, you may come through an unfamiliar word. To figure out what the meaning is, you utilize the text's clues as a guide. The clues can be found in the words and sentences around the unfamiliar word. Context clues are a type of hint. They are sometimes close to the new word, or you'll have to look in the paragraph before or after the word to find them. To put it another way, Context Clues is a technique for revealing the meaning of a difficult term by employing contextual clues such as words before or after the problematic words, the passage's title, or a picture.

Wulandari (2017) stated, for example, claims Context Clues are vital to include in the exam because they will help pupils improve their reading skills. Because students do not have a dictionary with them throughout the exam, there are likely to be many words in the reading text that they do not understand and cannot check. If they come across a word they don't recognize, they won't be able to spend much time figuring out what it means because they only have so much time to read. As a result, a context clue is required. In word recognition, context clues refer to determining the meaning of a word based on clues in the surrounding context.

Based on previous statements, context clues are a way for locating the meaning of a difficult term in a text by looking at. The hints can be located either before or after the specified term. Context clues are hints contained inside a sentence, paragraph, or passage that might help a reader figure out what new or unfamiliar words imply. Because a dictionary is not always available when a reader encounters an unknown word, learning the meaning of a word through its use in a phrase or paragraph is the most practical way to increase vocabulary.

Uzer (2019) highlights several advantages associated with context clues, which are as follows. Firstly, context clues aid readers in expanding their vocabulary by facilitating the understanding of unfamiliar words through the words they already know. Secondly, the precision of deducing unknown terms relies heavily on the attentiveness with which information is read, including factors like punctuation and keywords. Thirdly, context clues, embedded within sentences, paragraphs, or passages, serve as cues that assist readers in deciphering the implications of new or unfamiliar words. Given that a dictionary may not always be readily available, acquiring the meaning of a word through its contextual usage becomes the most practical approach to vocabulary enhancement. Additionally, the awareness that words can have multiple meanings underscores the importance of paying attention to the context in which a term is employed to accurately determine its intended definition for a given situation. Lastly, depending on the context, defining the meaning of a polysemous word can be particularly useful.

This skill promotes self-awareness by allowing students to define unfamiliar words on their own. The devices listed below are used by authors to include context hints into their writing. The goal isn't for students to memorize every form of context clues. It's more that students learn that authors provide suggestions in a variety of ways to assist learners in determining what words mean, so they are aware of these tactics. Although the following list appears to be simple, nice, and tidy, students should read the text in which unexpected words appear. This helps readers in deducing a word's meaning and appreciating the complete paragraph in which the word appears, allowing them to comprehend the text's content.

Sometimes writer uses some of clues to lead the reader to understand their passages. Context clues, according to Troyka & Thweatt (2009), fall into four groups: Restatement Context Clues: To find a restatement context clue, search for a concept that appears in the same or a related sentence but is expressed in a different word. Definition Context Clues: These indicate that the word is defined explicitly in the same sentence. Formal definitions are clear-cut and simple to recognize. Contrast Context Clues: When the word "opposite" or another sort of contrast is mentioned nearby, you can use this clue to determine the meaning of an unknown word. Context Clue Examples When an obscure word is followed by an example that clarifies its meaning, we are examining an example hint.

According to Stahl (1986) there are six types of context clues. Those are:

1) Definition/explanation

The new term may be formally defined, or an adequate explanation may be provided inside the sentence or the following sentence. Definition clues include "that is," commas, dashes, and parenthesis.

Example: the explorers landed in alien environment, a place both foreign and strange to their beloved homeland.

The definition is set off by a comma following the phrase in which the word appears. Alien means strange or foreign.

2. Dilarang mengumumkan dan memperbanyak sebagian atau seluruh karya tulis ini dalam bentuk apapun tanpa izin UIN Suska Riau.

2) Synonym

Unknown words may be understood by the reader if they match ideas presented in nearby familiar words. Synonyms are words that share the same meaning. Other words are used in the sentences with similar meaning.

Example:

- a) the slender woman was so thin her clothes were too big on her.
- b) The mountain pass was a tortuous road, winding and twisting like a snake around the trees of the mountainside.

“Tortuous” means “winding and twisting.”

3) Example

When a reader encounters a new word, they may find a nearby example that clarifies its meaning. Words like "including," "such as," and "for example" provide example clues.

Example: The bird’s appetite is voracious. In one day, he ate enough worms to equal three times his body weight.

The example illustration that the bird ate an extraordinary amount, therefore voracious means greedy.

4) Comparison

Comparison clues show that two or more things are alike.

Words like similar, as well as, both and likewise show that comparison is possible.

Example: The smell of the flower was as compelling as a magnet's pull on a paper clip.

Since a magnet will pull a paper clip to it, the comparison suggests that the smell of the flower had an attraction. Comparing means attracting.

5) Antonym/contrast

Antonyms are words with opposing meanings. An opposite meaning context clue contrasts the meaning of an unfamiliar word with a familiar term. Words like "although," "however," and "but" may indicate contrast.

Example: In America, she is an eminent scientist even though she is virtually unknown in England. It means well known or famous.

6) Inference

Word meanings are not directly described, but need to be inferred from the context. The reader may be able to deduce the meaning based on relevant clues

Example: Walt's pugnacious behavior made his opponent back down.

2. Reading Comprehension

Reading plays an important role in the teaching and learning process. Reading is one of the language skills the students should learn. This skill is very important in English that gives many benefits to them. Mauliza, Samad, and Erdiana (2019), the ability to read printed words is one of four key language skills. Through reading the text, the learners are involved in bringing the information, understanding, emotion, experience, and culture.

According to Patel and Jain (2008), reading is more than just a source of information and entertainment. Not only as a joyful activity but also as a technique of consolidating and expanding one's linguistic expertise. Reading is needed to gain knowledge and understanding of foreign cultures. and of course, reading is an important activity to expand knowledge related to a language.

Reading is one of the language skills, that need to be mastered well by way of students. Reading is an important aspect that influences one's interest in communication. People consider reading an important activity so people beings usually say that reading is the way to open the world. Reading is an interesting activity because by way of reading people can get some information widely without going away. Reading is an important thing for achievement in and out of school and is important to teaching within the content areas and for non-public enjoyment, interests, and social interaction. Reading is also defined as the process of understanding what means from a bit of text. In short, reading is a way to achieve meaning from the writer to the reader for you to get new information. Reading involves the interaction between the reader and the passage. The cause of reading is to get new information, increase new information, and entertain the readers.

According to Uzer (2019), reading is a process in which a reader obtains information as well as comprehends the meaning of the text. Reading is a set of skills that allows a reader to read independently, with comprehension, fluency, and mental interaction with the content. Reading is an important activity in mastering a language process. Through reading, we will achieve a number of meaningful information on many things. However, the purpose of teaching reading in a foreign language class or program is to help the students be able to understand, retrieve, and recover significant information that may be used later for various purposes. It is able to be a source of information and pleasurable activity, and also a way of consolidating and increasing one's knowledge.

Primarily based on the explanations above, the researcher concludes that reading is an activity to gain that means or to catch the information from the written text. In a reading activity, a reader brings her or his background understanding, making predictions of the writer's thoughts to get the meaning of the text, and drawing the means of symbols by means of interacting with the text in isolated activity. Therefore, reading is one of the most important skills that should be mastered by students to be able to get new information and grasp the meaning of the written text.

When someone reads a text, he or she expects to be able to make sense of it. This is called comprehension. Reading and comprehension are inextricably linked since the goal or outcome of reading are to comprehend what has been read. It's useless to read without comprehending what have read. Word recognition and comprehension are two intertwined processes in reading. The process of recognizing how written symbols correspond to one's spoken language is referred to as word recognition. Comprehension, on the other hand, is the process of making sense of words, sentences, and related text. Ramadhani, Harputra (2016) state that, when reading, students must be able to comprehend all of the text's contents as well as its information. When someone reads something, the reader actively participates in deciphering the writer's intended meaning by anticipating, assessing, and selecting important facts. A reader can draw meaning from a text by connecting the words he or she reads to his or her background or past information, such as linguistic expertise and experience. Reading is not an easy task. When someone reads a text, they decode the words in order to understand the meanings. Of course, a reader must have reading skills or practice in order to improve comprehension.

According to Harahap (2018), reading comprehension is the ability to comprehend and integrate the meaning with what the reader already knows. Knowing the meaning of words is one of the most important abilities for effective reading comprehension. The level of understanding of a text/message is referred to as reading comprehension. This comprehension is based on the interplay between the written words and their knowledge outside of the text/message. the researcher concludes that comprehension is a process in which readers engage in activities in order to comprehend the content they are reading.

There are three steps to understanding what have read. There are mentioning, practicing, and assessing to consider. Mentioning refers to a person's capacity to express their desire to employ a particular talent. The capacity to practice a skill through workbooks or skill sheets is referred to as practicing. Then there is assessing, which refers to the ability to determine whether or not talent was used well.

According to the above statements, reading comprehension is the process of generating meaning from text. The ultimate purpose of all reading education is to assist a reader in comprehending text.

In accordance with Patel and Jain's (2008) insights, the reading process unfolds in three distinctive stages. Firstly, the Recognition stage involves students becoming acquainted with the graphic representation of phonemes, such as recognizing spoken words in written form. The level of complexity in this stage is influenced by disparities between the student's native language and English, as well as the divergent spelling rules inherent in each language. Moving forward, the Structuring stage follows, where learners grasp the syntactic relationships of items and comprehend the structural meaning of syntactical units. Lastly, the Interpretation stage represents the most advanced phase of the reading process. Within this context, students gain an understanding of the meaning behind words, phrases, or sentences. This stage goes beyond mere comprehension, extending to recognizing the nuanced use of language for serious and jocular expressions, as well as discerning the distinction between factual declarations and opinion statements. It is at this juncture that individuals transition towards reading for knowledge or sheer enjoyment.

Students need to comprehend how to apply various skills in enhancing their reading comprehension. Firstly, understanding the topic of the text is crucial, as it represents broad information that encompasses the content of entire paragraphs within a text document. Moving on, recognizing the main idea is equally important, as it provides a comprehensive sense of the paragraphs. The main idea serves as a crucial element in displaying the text's information or message, and it can be found either in the first or last sentence. Additionally, students should be adept at identifying supporting details, which are facts and ideas that validate or elucidate the main idea or a paragraph. It is essential to note that not every detail holds equal significance, even though each contributes to the overall main concept. Another key skill involves finding the author's idea, wherein students must consider their own level of knowledge and pay attention to the text's structure. Furthermore, mastering word reference is essential, where nouns are replaced by possessive pronouns or adjectives. Pronouns and adjectives like he, she, it, they, them, and his, her, their are commonly used, and the word reference is typically found in phrases or sentences following the referred noun. Lastly, the skill of inference is vital in reading comprehension. Inference involves drawing conclusions based on implied rather than explicitly stated information in a sentence or passage. This skill requires readers to make logical connections and assumptions based on contextual clues, enhancing their understanding of the sentence or text. Here is an example of an English word reference:

- a) Andi is my English teacher. He is cheerful person and his height is very tall. He has an expensive motorcycle and it was bought by him last year. Its color is red.
- b) Leaves are found on all shed trees, but they diverge greatly in size and shape.

In the first example, the words underlined (he, it, and its) are Andi's reference words. In the second sentence, the word reference is they which refers to the word 'leaves'.

Determining word reference in questions and English text involves a systematic approach. First, it is advisable to read the questions attentively, focusing on the Word Reference (pronoun) mentioned in the lines queried. Next, directly navigate to the line specified in the question and locate the word reference (pronoun) within that particular line in the text. When concentrating on the sentence structure, pay attention solely to one line before the queried line, disregarding the sentences before or after it. Additionally, observe whether the pronoun in the question pertains to a singular or plural noun. If it relates to a singular noun, identify the singular noun preceding the pronoun; conversely, if it pertains to a plural noun, locate the plural noun accordingly. Employ the strategy of elimination by excluding incorrect choices, for instance, discarding choices with pronouns referring to the wrong noun number. This step reduces the number of answer choices, facilitating a more streamlined search for the correct response. Ultimately, the decision on what noun accurately substitutes the position of the pronoun is crucial for a precise and comprehensive understanding of the text.

According to Santosa (2017), stated Teachers, in this case English teachers, should not just focus on addressing grammar (language rules) in the teaching and learning process, but vocabulary should be the center of learning in English. The more students gain a large vocabulary, the easier it is for them to understand what they read. So, adding vocabulary is very important to improve their reading ability. without increasing vocabulary, they will not understand what they read. Moreover. it's not easy to teach reading comprehension. According to Wulandari (2017), the purpose of reading comprehension instruction is to improve students' capacity to extract the meaning from the data. When teaching reading comprehension, teachers are attempting to implant something in the students' minds that will allow them to absorb the material. When teaching reading, the teacher or lecturer should encourage pupils to build their own reading skills. An independent reader must be able to overcome the challenge of reading a text that they have never seen before. Reading teachers or lecturers must make it possible for students to do so. The role of the instructor in reading is to develop the students' capacity to read rather than to maintain the students' ability to read.

According to Bamberg (1975), the purpose of reading instruction is to enable students to make full use of their reading abilities. In other words, it will have the greatest impact on his well-being and will lead to self-realization, effective use of reading as a tool of learning and investigation,

According to Lubis (2016), the generic structure of a narrative text is comprised of distinct stages. Firstly, the Orientation or exposition stage serves to introduce the primary and potentially minor characters to the readers. This section often provides an indication of the setting and timeframe in which the story unfolds. Following this, the Complication or rising action stage intensifies as a series of events unfold, each contributing to a forthcoming complication or issue. The element of unpredictability adds excitement, with major protagonists becoming entangled in difficulties that temporarily hinder their progress towards the story's goal. The Sequence of events or climax stage delves into how the characters respond to the predicament, delving into their emotions and actions. Narration may follow a chronological order or incorporate flashbacks, and the narrator's perspective is presented to the audience. Subsequently, the Resolution or falling action stage addresses the implication of the issue, whether for better or worse. Although rarely left entirely unresolved, some narrative styles may deliberately leave room for speculation about the story's conclusion. Finally, the Reorientation stage, while optional, provides a sense of closure to the events narrated.

Narrative texts commonly incorporate specific language features to enhance the storytelling experience. Firstly, adjectives play a crucial role in building detailed noun groups that vividly describe the characters, animals, or objects within the story. For instance, phrases like "a nice, diligent, and kind-hearted man" contribute to a more nuanced portrayal. Additionally, the use of time connectives and conjunctions is prevalent, helping to sequence events chronologically. Words like "however," "although," "later," and "then" guide the reader through the unfolding story. Furthermore, adverbs and adverbial phrases are employed to locate specific events in time, establishing an atmospheric context. Examples like "once upon a time" and "long time ago" transport readers into different temporal realms. Finally, past tenses are a common linguistic element, providing a structured narrative framework. Sentences like "Aji Saka went to the kingdom" and "measured the size of the turban" employ past tenses to convey a sense of historical progression within the storytelling. Overall, these language features collectively contribute to the rich and engaging nature of narrative texts.

B. Relevant Research

There are several studies that are considered relevant to this study, the first research by Wulandari (2017), The Use of Context Clues in Improving Students' Reading Ability. This research was classroom action research which was set out in two cycles. This research was conducted in the third semester students of Agriculture Technology Department, Polytechnic of Tonggak Equator. Based on the finding and the result, the researcher concluded that the students' reading ability was improved from pre-test and progress test from cycle to cycle. In the first cycle, the mean score of the students' reading ability was 77.6. Then, in the second cycle, it improved become 88.8.

research was class IX – 1 in SMPN 1 Binjai which consisted of 23 students. The research result showed that using Context Clues Technique could improve students' comprehension in reading report text. Based on multiple choice test results, students' scores kept improving in every test. The mean score of the first meeting test in first cycle was 60.87, the mean score of the third meeting test in first cycle was 74.35, and the mean score of the third meeting test in second cycle was 94.35.

The third research by Zuhra and Ningsih (2020), The Use of Context Clues Strategy to Improve the Students' Reading Comprehension Skills. Based on the result of this research, the researcher concluded that there is a significant difference between the students' score in comprehending reading in pre-test and post-test. It can be seen from the result of pre-test and post-test. The average score of the students' post-test is higher at 77 than the average score of the students' pre-test is 33. It can be concluded the use of Context Clues Strategy improved the students' reading comprehension skills.

The fourth research is conducted by Oclarit, and Casinillo (2021), Strengthening the Reading Comprehension of Students Using a Context Clue. This study was conducted in 8 elementary schools where the respondents are bona fide Grade 4 learners of San Ricardo District. The study investigated the effectiveness of context clues as aid for reading comprehension through enhancing student's vocabulary which utilizes the revised Philippine Informal Reading Inventory (Phil-IRI). The researcher concluded that the use of context clues increases the reading comprehension of the students. Pre-test to post-test result shows to have a significant improvement to students' reading ability. Thus, context clues have exhibit positive impact to reading comprehension of grade 4 students.

The fifth research by Harahap, The Effect of Context Clues Mastery on Students' Reading Comprehension of Procedure Text (A Study at the Eleventh Grade Students of SMA Negeri 5 Padangsidimpuan). Based on this study it can be concluded that there is a significant effect of context clues mastery on students' reading comprehension of procedure text at the eleventh-grade students of SMA Negeri 5 Padangsidimpuan. After collecting the data, the mean of application description of context clues mastery is 3.60. It is categorized "Very Good". The students' reading comprehension of procedure text before using context clues mastery is 73.23. It is categorized "Good". The student's reading comprehension of procedure text after using context clues mastery is 85.81. It is categorized "Very Good". The calculation of  $t_{test}$  formula is 7.82, and  $t_{table}$  is 2.04.

Based on the relevant research presented above, it is clear that there are certain differences between past studies in terms of research sites, research subjects, and research restrictions. And from the prior studies, which investigated gaps owing to context, content, and technique. Two of these were earlier studies that used classroom action research (CAR) as a research design, process text, and reports, but none of them included narrative text as part of the test. So, the researcher chose this topic because it will be different from other studies. The purpose of this study is to determine The Effect of Using Context Clues Technique on Students' Reading Comprehension in Narrative Text at the Tenth Grade of Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang.

C. Operational Concept

The operational concept is a term used to explain the theoretical framework in order to avoid misinterpretation and misunderstanding of the study. This research is designed to be experimental research. An experiment entails changing the value of one variable, referred to as the independent variable "X Variable," and evaluating the effect on another variable, referred to as the dependent variable "Y Variable."

There are two variables used in the research, there are variable X and Variable Y. Context Clue Technique is an independent variable known as variable X and students' reading comprehension is dependent variable known as variable Y. The indicators are as follows:

1. Variable X: The use of Context Clue Technique

The indicator of variable X as the procedure of teaching reading by using Context Clues Technique according to Apriliyanti, Tarigan, and Pangaribuan (2018) as follows:

- a. List 8-12 words on the board. Next to the word, in parentheses, write the page number, paragraph number, column number, or any other designation that will help students find the word in context.
- b. When class begins, instruct students to copy words from the board with parenthetical information.
- c. Assign students to groups of four. Make sure they move their desks together and are facing each other.

- d. Explain the following rules: Each group must determine the meaning of each word based on how it is used in context. The parenthetical information helps students locate the word. Students may not use any source other than the page numbers in parentheses and their teammates.
  - e. As students eagerly define words, make a grid on the board: words listed on the side, team names listed across the top.
  - f. Begin the contests when sufficient time has passed.
  - g. Ask group 1 for their definition 1 of a word. Write it in the corresponding grid space.
2. Variable Y: Students' Reading Comprehension in narrative text

The indicator of variable Y based on syllabus at Tenth grade of Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang:

- a. The students are able to identify the topic of narrative text.

CHAPTER III RESEARCH METHODOLOGY

A. Research Design

This research was an experimental research approach to conduct quantitative research. According to Cresswell (2012), quantitative approaches include the processes of collecting, analyzing, interpreting, and writing the findings of the study. Furthermore, according to Gay (2012), quantitative research is the gathering and analysis of numerical data in order to characterize, explain, forecast, or control events of interest. The purpose of quantitative research is to develop and use mathematical models, theories, and/or hypotheses related to natural phenomena. The measurement process is a crucial part of quantitative research. This provides an overview or answers to the fundamental relationship of the quantitative relationship (Hardani, et.al, 2020).

This type of research is quasi-experimental using pre-test and post-test non-equivalent control group. Quasi experimental research is the stuff of field experimentation (Cohen, et.al, 2007). According to Creswell (2012), quasi-experiments are instances in which the researcher assigns participants to groups, but not at random, because the experiment cannot intentionally establish groups.

Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang students were given a pre-test at the beginning to determine their ability to comprehend the narrative content. After that, they had treatment in the middle. They were given a post-test at the end. A pretest and posttest were administered to both the experimental and control groups in this study. This study tries to determine the usefulness given by the variable X to Y.

In brief, the design can be seen in the following table:

Table III. 1
Table of Research Design

Group	Pre-test	Treatment	Post-test
Experimental	X1	T	Y1
Control	X2	-	Y2

(Hardani, et.al, 2020)

Where:

X1 : Pre-test in experimental group

X2 : Pre-test in control group

Y1 : Post-test in experimental group

Y2 : Pre-test in control group

T : Treatment

According to the description above, the treatment was only given to the experimental group. The experimental group was treated by using the Context Clues Technique, meanwhile, the control group was not taught any treatments.

B. Time and Location of the Research

This research was conducted by the researcher in Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang, which is located Jl. LetkolSyarifuddinSyarif, Bangkinang. This research was conducted from July to September 2023.

C. Subject and Object of the Research

The subject of this research is tenth-grade students of Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang. The object of this research is The Effect of Using Context Clues Technique on students' reading comprehension.

D. Population and Sample of the Research

1. Population

According to Cresswell (2012:142), the target population or sample frame is a group of people or an organization with a shared distinguishing trait to whom the researcher can apply the research's findings. According to Ary (2010:148), population refers to the members of any well-defined class of people, events, or objects. The target of the population in this research is the tenth-grade students of Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang. The number of the tenth grade students of Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang is 188 students with 6 classes.

2. Sample

The researcher decided to use a cluster random sampling strategy to select the sample of this study because the population was larger. According to Sugiyono (2014), cluster random is used to determine the sample if the object to be studied or the data source is very large, for example, the population of a country, province, or district. In this research, the researcher took the classes by using a lottery. The researcher made the paper rolls and then selected them randomly. IV A is the experimental class, while IV C is the control class.

E. Technique of the Collecting Data

To collect data for this study, the researcher employed tests (pre-test and post-test). Students were required to answer questions based on the text provided in this test. A test, according to Brown (2007), is a way of assessing a person's skill, knowledge, or performance in a specific topic. A multiple-choice test is used to assess students' reading comprehension of narrative text. There are a total of 20 questions on the test. Each multiple-choice item had four possible answers (a,b,c, and d). The test was administered twice: the first was a pre-test conducted before treatment, and the second was a post-test administered after treatment. The following table presents the blueprint of multiple-choice items that was being used in collecting the data, the data was described for each indicator.

Table III. 2
Blue Print of Reading Test

NO	INDICATORS	QUESTION NUMBER
		NUMBER OF ITEM	TOTAL ITEM
1.	Identifying the topic of narrative text.	1, 6, 11, 16	4
2.	Identifying the word references of narrative text.	2, 7, 12, 17	4
3.	Identifying the social function of narrative text.	3, 8, 13, 18	4
4.	Identifying the generic structure of narrative text.	4, 9, 14, 19	4
5.	Identifying to identify the inference of narrative text.	5, 10, 15, 20	4

In this research, the test was divided into two ways; pre-test which was given before the treatment, and post-test which was given after doing treatment.

1. Procedures of Collecting Data for Experimental Class

a. Pre-test

The pre-test is carried out to determine the student's reading ability with their score. A multiple-choice test measures students' comprehension of a narrative text. The test has 20 questions, with four possible answers for each multiple-choice item (a, b, c, and d).

b. Treatment

The treatment is conducted teaching learning activity the students in experimental class by using Context Clues Technique.

c. Post-test

Post-test done once. After giving the treatment, the post-test was administered and analyzed as final data for this research.

2. Procedures of Collecting Data for Control Class

a. Pre-test

The control class was given pre-test to know their reading ability. The test was the same as experimental class.

b. No treatment

c. Post-test

Post-test in control group was also done once, and the result was analyzed and used as final data for this research.

After the students did the test, then the researcher took the total score from the result of the reading comprehension test. According to Arikunto(2013: 281), the classification of the student's score can be seen below:

Table III. 3
Classification of Students' Score

	Categories
81-100	Very Good
66-80	Good
56-65	Enough
41-55	Less
15-40	Fail

(Arikunto, 2013)

F. Validity and Reliability of the Test

1. Validity of the Test

Validity refers to how appropriate, meaningful, and valuable the conclusions drawn from the assessment's results are in connection to the assessment's purpose (Brown, 2003, p.3). Brown (2003, p.22) adds that the test's validity is the most difficult criterion. The amount to which conclusions drawn from the results of judgments are suitable, meaningful, and useful in terms of the assessment's aims is likely the most essential concept. This indicates that in order to judge a student's abilities, validity is required.

Validity is determined by how well it measures only what it is designed to assess. To put it another way, a validity test is used to decide whether or not a test should be used. The researcher in this study employed content validity to determine if the test was valid or not. Before giving the test, the researcher offered the students practice tests to see how difficult or easy the items were. According to Kimberlin and Winterstein (2008), content validity is a sort of validity that considers how well questions were produced to operationalize a construct and if they give a sufficient and representative sample of all items that could measure the construct of interest. Because there is no statistical technique to establish if a measure adequately covers a topic area or adequately represents a concept, content validity is typically determined by expert judgment. The test was be given based on the information that the pupils had learned. The test's content is based on a textbook or other resource utilized by Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang's tenth grade students.

To determine the validity of the test in this study, the researcher used the SPSS 25 version. The default value for validity is  $r_{\text{item}} > r_{\text{table}}$ . Based on the results of the trials, it was concluded that all of the items were correct. The outcome of the trial is as follows:

Table III. 4
Item Validity of Tryout

2. Reliability of the Test

According to Brown (2003, p.19), reliability has to do with measurement precision. Reliability is also very important. When the measurement was repeated on different days, with different instruments, and by different people, the results were consistently identical. Consistency was a phrase used to describe the trait of reliability. In summary, the test was reliable if the examinee's results were consistent over multiple measurements.

In this study, the researcher was use Test-Retest reliability to determine the consistency of reading comprehension in narrative literature. According to Kimberlin and Winterstein (2008), the test-retest reliability of a test is determined, by administering it to the same participants at two different times and determining the correlation or intensity of the association between the two sets of results. The same process can be used to calibrate a medical measurement instrument, such as a scale. When tests are administered regularly, the second administration's timing is critical. The time between administrations should ideally be long enough that the second administration's results are unaffected by the first.

According to Cohen (2007), the guidelines for reliability is as follows:

Table III. 5
Category of Reliability

No	Reliability	Category
1.	>0.90	Very high reliable
2.	0.80-0.90	High reliable
3.	0.70-0.79	Reliable
4.	0.60-0.69	Minimally reliable
5.	<0.60	Unacceptably low

(Cohen, 2007)

In this research, the researcher used the software SPSS 23 version to calculate the reliability of the test. The result of calculation reliability can be seen in the table below:

Table III. 6
Reliability

Cronbach's Alpha	N of Items
0.933	20

3. Technique of the Data Analysis

The researcher was using the SPSS 25.0 version to statistically analyze the data for the research. The data is analyzed using an independent sample t-test to determine whether the research result is statistically significant. The effect magnitude of the phenomena was discovered after the researcher discovered the difference. At Islamic Senior High School Daarun Nahdhah Thawalib Bangkinang, the level of effect of using Context Clues on reading comprehension was calculated using the eta squared formula:

$$\text{Eta Square: } \frac{t^2}{t^2 + (N1+N2-2)}$$

$$t^2 + (N1+N2-2)$$

Where:

$t$  : Obtained

$N_1$  : The number of experimental class

$N_2$  : The number of control class

According to Pallant (2005), the guidelines of interpretation for this value are:

0-0.1 = Small effect

0.06 = Moderate effect

0.14 = Large effect
